Veterans don't have to look very far for help

Need assistance? The Philadelphia Veterans Advisory Commission consults with government and nonprofits.

Whether they are veterans recently returning from battlefields in the Middle Eastern desert or drifting aimlessly through deserted streets, the city, state and federal governments make resources available to help them reintegrate into the communities they served to protect.

In this city, in an office just outside the City Hall courtyard, a division of the Philadelphia Veterans Advisory Commission is available to help.

PVAC is directed to consult with government and nonprofit agencies that distribute veterans' benefits and to advise them of entitlements.

The office is a conduit. If a veteran is in need of assistance, officials point them in the right direction.

Wanda Pate-Dennis, veterans coordinator for the Veterans Advisory Commission, works with more than 50 organizations.

For veterans just coming home, "The most important thing is for them to know that there are resources and benefits for them and that we can help them get to those resources and benefits," she said.

For veterans who are homeless, the office can help arrange shelter, find alcohol and drug treatment programs, and connect with the federal veterans affairs organization.

"We count on veterans organizations who are providers of these services," she said.

PVAC is composed of seven members appointed by the mayor and City Council president.

Ari Merretazon, who represents the Pointman Soldiers Heart Ministry, maintains that only an independent veterans affairs office with a full-time director can appropriately serve the veteran population. City officials have said that is not entirely true.

"We need an advocate and facilitator at the city level to make sure that veterans who are supposed to receive benefits receive those benefits," he said.

David Kamioner, executive director of the Philadelphia Veterans Comfort House, said the Veterans Advisory Commission office "acts as a clearinghouse," and members wade through the bureaucracy to get help to veterans.

"[Wanda Pate-Dennis] knows where those bones are buried," he said.

Pate-Dennis said that while her office doesn't have a director, it can get things done, and that's all that matters.

"We're not saying we've conquered, we've got the battle done," Pate-Dennis said.

"This is an ongoing fight. This is an ongoing charge toward making sure that every veteran knows there are resources."

A 36-year-old Philadelphia man and his 24-year-old Willow Grove companion were charged Monday in connection with the theft of $400 worth of razor blades from a Bucks County supermarket, reports say.

John Herbert of Philadelphia and Amanda M. Bratzler of Willow Grove were seen by employees of the Giant Supermarket on Route 611 in Warrington.

The razors were dropped into Bratzler's purse before exiting, according to a report.

The two were charged with retail theft, criminal conspiracy and receiving stolen property. METRO

Bank. Corbett highest paid governor in US, according to survey

Though many states are freezing or cutting governors' salaries due to economic hardships, Pennsylvania is apparently bucking the trend.

Given the deep funding cuts coming out of Harrisburg, which have led to billion-dollar deficits in the Philadelphia public school and social services systems, it may rankle some residents to learn that Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Corbett is the highest-earning governor in the country, according to a survey released by the Council of State Governments.

Corbett, one of just seven governors whose 2013 salary increased over 2012 levels, earns $187,256 a year. The survey notes Corbett has refused at least three cost-of-living adjustments, which makes his actual pay closer to $175,000.

Even that figure would still rank Corbett toward the top of the list of highest-earning governors – New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo came in second with an annual pay of $179,000. Corbett also makes much more than the average U.S. gubernatorial salary, which in 2013 was $133,348.

The governors of Florida, Tennessee, Alabama and Michigan either don't accept pay or return it to the state.

Home invasion. Del. woman shot in front of her daughter, 12

Delaware State Police are crediting a 12-year-old for calling 911 after her mother, 38, was shot during a home invasion yesterday on Fox Glove Run in Lewes.

Investigators said two men – both wearing dark-colored pants and one armed with a handgun – forced their way into the residence shortly after 6:30 a.m. Once inside, they allegedly entered a bedroom where a woman and her daughter were sleeping.

After the two awoke, one of the men fired a single round at the woman, striking her in the head, police said.

The suspects then left the home empty-handed.

Supreme Court guts key part of landmark Voting Rights Act

Rights. Obama calls on Congress to pass a new law ensuring equal access to voting for all.

The Supreme Court yesterday gutted a key part of the landmark Voting Rights Act, passed in 1965 to end a century of attempts by former slaveholding states to block black citizens from voting.

In a 5-4 ruling with the court's conservatives in the majority, the justices ruled that Congress had used obsolete reasoning in continuing to force nine states, mainly in the South, to get federal approval for voting rule changes affecting blacks and other minorities.

The court ruled in favor of officials from Alabama, by declaring invalid a section of the law that set a formula to determine which states need federal approval to change voting laws.

"I am deeply disappointed with the Supreme Court's decision today," President Barack Obama said in a statement.

The ruling upended important legal protections for minority voters that were a key achievement of the U.S. civil rights movement of the 1960s led by Martin Luther King Jr. The decision also placed the burden on Congress — sharply divided along party lines — to pass any new voting rights law.

Obama, Dems vow to act on voter rights after ruling

President Barack Obama and Democrats in Congress yesterday promised to act swiftly to restore protections for the voting rights of African-Americans and other minorities after the Supreme Court struck down a core provision of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Russia rules out expulsion of Snowden, rejects US 'ravings'

Finding refuge. Washington has gone to great lengths to try to ensure Snowden has nowhere to go.

"I, myself, would prefer not to deal with these issues. It's like shearing a piglet: There's a lot of squealing, but there's little wool." Putin

Russian President Vladimir Putin confirmed yesterday that a former U.S. spy agency contractor sought by the United States was in the transit area of a Moscow airport but ruled out handing him over to Washington, dismissing U.S. criticisms as "ravings and rubbish."

In his first public comments since the fugitive flew in on Sunday, Putin appeared to make light of the controversy around Edward Snowden, whose flight from U.S. authorities is becoming a source of increasing embarrassment for President Barack Obama. Asked by a journalist about the affair, he smiled fleetingly.

"I, myself, would prefer not to deal with these issues. It's like shearing a piglet: There's a lot of squealing, but there's little wool," he told reporters.

His refusal to hand over Snowden risked deepening a rift with the United States that has also sucked in China and threatens relations between countries that may be essential in settling global conflicts, including the Syrian civil war.

Putin said the 30-year-old American was in Moscow's Sheremetyevo airport and, not having gone through passport control, was free to leave.

"The sooner he chooses his final destination, the better it would be for us and for himself," he said.

Snowden has applied for asylum in Ecuador, which is reportedly still considering the application; the United States is trying to persuade the governments of countries where he might head to hand him over. His plans remain unclear. REUTERS

Charged

Snowden has been charged by the U.S. government with disclosing secret surveillance programs that the Obama administration considers vital for national security.

Payback?

U.S. angry about Snowden's protectors

U.S. officials and lawmakers have made it clear they're furious at the governments that have played a role in enabling fugitive security contractor Edward Snowden's globetrotting, but Washington is expected to take a restrained approach to any retribution.

Federal officials and legislators angered and dismayed by the cat-and-mouse game have directed unspecified threats at Hong Kong, China and Russia, as well as Ecuador.

Washington has a range of options, which include making it difficult for citizens of these countries to get U.S. visas. Or it could impose sanctions on some imports and delay foreign investment deals. REUTERS

Obama details plan to thwart

Presidential power. Obama seeks to limit carbon emissions and stop pollution.

President Barack Obama launched a new plan to tackle climate change yesterday with a call to limit carbon pollution from all U.S. power plants.

Obama's long-awaited plan, detailed in a speech at Georgetown University, drew sharp criticism from the coal industry, which would be hit hard by carbon limits, and Republicans, who accused the Democratic president of advancing policies that harm the economy.

Obama's first-term attempt to reduce climate-warming carbon emissions in a "cap and trade" system was thwarted by Congress, and his administration's long process of studying whether to approve the Keystone XL pipeline has raised the hackles of business groups and Republican opponents.

Using his executive powers, Obama said he was directing the Environmental Protection Agency to craft new emissions rules for thousands of power plants, the bulk of which burn coal and account for roughly one-third of U.S. greenhouse gas emissions.

"We don't have time for a meeting of the flat Earth society," Obama said, referencing critics who do not believe climate change is happening. REUTERS

Quoted

"Laying out specific details makes it a lot more difficult for the president to turn back."

Michael Levi, head of the Council on Foreign Relations' energy and climate program

Quoted

"Our national interest will be served only if this project does not significantly exacerbate the problem of carbon pollution. The net effects of the pipeline's impact on our climate will be absolutely critical to determining whether this project is allowed to go forward." Obama

climate change

The plan's domestic highlights

The White House yesterday released a plan to cut global carbon pollution and address the effects of climate change in three broad ways: cutting carbon pollution domestically, preparing the country to be resilient to climate-related impacts and leading international efforts to combat global warming. Here are the key points of the administration's Climate Action Plan:

- Obama will issue a presidential order to direct the country's chief environmental regulator, the Environmental Protection Agency, to complete performance standards for lowering carbon emissions from existing power plants with feedback from states, power companies and other stakeholders.
- The EPA is directed to finalize carbon limits for new power plants by Sept. 20.
- The EPA is directed to draft carbon limits for existing power plants by June 2014, to be finalized one year later.
- The Department of the Interior is tasked with permitting enough renewable energy projects — wind and solar, for example — on public lands by 2020 to power more than 6 million homes. The agency is also directed with installing 100 megawatts of renewables on federally assisted housing by 2020.
- The United States has set a goal to reduce carbon pollution by at least 3 billion metric tons cumulatively by 2030, more than half the annual carbon pollution from the U.S. energy sector, via efficiency standards for appliances and federal buildings.

Keystone. Obama to approve pipeline only if it has no emissions

President Barack Obama said yesterday that the Keystone pipeline should only be approved if it does not increase greenhouse gas emissions.

The Keystone XL pipeline, which would carry oil from Canada to refineries in Texas, was one of several topics Obama was expected to address in a climate change speech. REUTERS

Analysis

Coal company shares take hit

Share prices for major U.S. coal mining companies slipped again yesterday after falling sharply on Monday in anticipation of the president's climate plan.

The EPA is routinely challenged in court, both by industry groups seeking to quash rules and by green groups trying to push the agency to set tougher standards. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and Republican-leaning states have petitioned the Supreme Court to review rules to cut greenhouse gas emissions. The details of the new regulations will be drafted over the next year, and their costs are still to be determined. Obama wants them finalized by June 2015.

Holly Madison is engaged, with a big rock to prove it

Holly Madison! You in danger, girl!

It looks like the reality TV star is going through with her engagement with party promoter (and father to her infant daughter, Rainbow), Pasquale Rotella.

She showed off her giant new engagement ring, which was designed by Rotella, on her blog and to People magazine. The 18-carat yellow diamond ring is surrounded by pink and yellow flowers made from diamonds. And, oh yeah — owls.

"Because we love owls, there is a hidden owl engraved on the rose gold in between two of the flowers," she says. "The band is art nouveau-inspired, to go with the flowers."

Holly Madison's ginormous owl-themed ring is hopefully big enough that she will overlook the fact that she's marrying a man who will probably go to prison in the next year. Rotella is facing more than 13 years in prison on bribery, embezzlement, conspiracy and conflict of interest charges, per reports. The L.A. County district attorney says that Rotella, who owns a firm called Insomniac Events, used more than $2.5 million in funds from the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum to pay off city officials. Rotella would use the coliseum to host raves.

Rotella is currently out on a $1.8 million bail and is due back in court July 29. So basically, Madison, who was previously engaged to the 80-something Hugh Hefner, likes to choose mates who she thinks she won't have to be with for very long.

Sweetin separates from third husband

Jodie Sweetin might not have the career of big TV and movie stars, but she has the love life of one.

The former "Full House" star has separated from her third husband, musician Morty Coyle, after a little over a year of marriage.

Just take a moment to let that sink in: Jodie is on her third marriage, and she's only 31.

And it only gets sadder: Jodie wants full custody of their daughter, Beatrix, 2, as well as their car, a Toyota Avalon.

Meanwhile, the Olsen twins are probably lighting giant cigars with burning $100 bills. The middle sisters always miss out.

Entertainment Weekly says it's the most-watched summer debut on any network since NBC's "The Singing Bee" in 2007. Miley Cyrus threatens her dad on Twitter

A word to the wise: If Miley Cyrus is trying to get a hold of you, answer her texts. Otherwise she might publicly threaten you.

On Tuesday, Miley tweeted at her father, Billy Ray Cyrus, "@billyraycyrus since you won't reply to my texts I'm giving you an hour to tell the truth or ill tell it for you." Attached to the tweet was a pic of Miley smiling for the camera with an unidentified older woman, according to Hollywood Life.

Billy Ray is in the midst of a divorce from Miley's mom, Tish Cyrus. Does Miley's tweet have something to do with their split?

We'll never know, as it was quickly deleted and disavowed by Miley, who tweeted, "Wtf? My twitter was just actin all types of cray!"

So there are three possibilities here. One, Miley was hacked. Two, she meant to send a DM and sent a tweet instead. Or three, Billy Ray did what she wanted before the hour was up.

Kelly Lynch returns for the second season of Starz's "Magic City."
FILMMAGIC, GETTY IMAGES

KELLY LYNCH

The film actress discusses going TV and working with her husband.

KEEPING THE 'MAGIC' ALIVE

Since the '80s, Kelly Lynch has been the kind of beautiful actress who knows how to be taken seriously. The same year she popped up in a ridiculous Patrick Swayze sex scene in "Road House," she delivered a gritty turn in Gus Van Sant's junkie saga "Drugstore Cowboy." Since then she's jumped back and forth between blockbusters and smaller, more character-driven work. She's sometimes done that with her husband, producer, writer and director Mitch Glazer. The two reunite for the second season of "Magic City," airing Fridays on Starz, on which she plays the increasingly involved former sister-in-law of '50s Miami hotelier Ike (Jeffrey Dean Morgan).

"Movies shoot three pages a day. We can shoot 12, easily. It probably doesn't sound like much, but it's daunting."

A lot of film actors are gravitating towards television these days.
Our whole cast off-duty makes movies. And we all come from movies. A lot of movies are either $1 million things that you hope will be really cool, or they're giant cartoons. Storytelling, like in the great '70s movies like "The Godfather" — those aren't made anymore. Those are now TV shows on cable.

How do you work with your fellow actors?
The more a group of actors feels like a family to me, the safer I feel. If I go to a place with another person as a character, there's a foundation of friendship and respect that's really helpful. The fact that we all love each other helps. Mitch put this group together. Everyone makes me better.

What about working with your husband?
At home he's my husband. At work he's my boss. It's a very weird dynamic. It first happened years ago, that we had a chance to work together [on 1993's "Three of Hearts"]. Both of us were driving to work, and one of us went, "Oh, we'll be working together."

Q&A

What's it like not always knowing where your character will wind up versus a film, where there's a definite ending?
In a film you're stuck with a script. Television is open-ended. You never know who's going to live, who's going to die. I live with [Glazer], and until we get the scripts, I have no clue what's going on. Some of them have been shocking. I love that element of surprise. It keeps me very nimble as an actor. It's different than any way I've worked.

Some film actors are amazed at how quickly television shooting goes by.
I always felt as an actor if I didn't have it by the third take I was in trouble. I did a pretty big movie with an actor who did 56 takes, during a shot where I had to cry. He was trying to get to a place, and by the end of it I looked like a raccoon or a squirrel, a monster. Shooting fast, it separates the grown-ups from the little kids. You just have to do it. You don't have that safety net [on TV] where you can reshoot or come back. Movies shoot three pages a day. We can shoot 12, easily. It probably doesn't sound like much, but it's daunting.

‘Devious Maids’ features ‘two worlds colliding’

See more at www.metro.us

Television. The new Lifetime series follows five Hispanic maids who work for some of the wealthiest families in Beverly Hills.

Dania Ramirez, Judy Reyes and Roselyn Sanchez star on “Devious Maids.” / ABC STUDIOS, GETTY IMAGES

For decades, audiences knew her as a dramatic — some may even say melodramatic — soap actress. But there is another side to Susan Lucci.

“She is so hysterically funny, and I think that is something really new and interesting because I don’t think people have seen her be this funny and this free,” says Ana Ortiz, who stars with Lucci on the new Lifetime series “Devious Maids.”

“I used to look at people on film doing comedy,” says Lucci. “‘How do they do that with so many takes, so many bits and pieces.’ I already had so much respect for them.”

The series follows five Hispanic maids who work for some of the wealthiest and most powerful families in Beverly Hills. As the season is unveiled, the maids show they can be as devilish, scheming and witty as their employers.

“All the characters are fully realized characters. There is not one cardboard, cartoon in the entire group.” Lucci

“Devious Maids” is executive produced by Eva Longoria and Mark Cherry, who also created “Desperate Housewives.”

“Just the name Marc Cherry. ‘Marc Cherry has a new show? Yes, I would like to be a part of that.’ Then, when I read the script it was a page-turner,” says Lucci, who plays one of the high-society mavens. “There are hilarious aspects and then there are intriguing things: The twists, the turns, the surprises. He does them so well.

“All the characters,” says Lucci, “are fully realized characters. There is not one cardboard cartoon in the entire group.”

“There is hilarity, heart, drama and sex,” adds Ortiz, who played Hilda Suarez on “Ugly Betty.” It, like “Devious Maids,” was based on a successful Spanish-language TV show that aired in Latin and South America. “I have had good luck with these novellas-turned-American shows. For me it was a no brainer. There is, for lack of a better term, a real ‘Upstairs/Downstairs’ quality, that I think people are really tuning into right now,” says Ortiz. “It’s the two worlds colliding.”

DEAN LISK

Another view

Stereotype central?

“Devious Maids” has already faced criticism for its portrayal of Hispanic women as servants, criticism that Eva Longoria, who executive produces the series with Marc Cherry, takes exception to.

“You are telling me their stories aren’t worth telling, that maids are not complex, that they don’t have a life, that they don’t have a story to tell? They do,” Longoria says, who adds that mothers who worked as maids have raised many successful Hispanic people in the U.S.

“With the demographic of the United States changing rapidly, we should represent our diverse country on television.”

Get playful at the art museum this summer with Art Splash

Exhibit. There's a "Candy Coated Wonderland" on the Parkway.

Step into a wonderland during Art Splash. / PHILADELPHIA MUSEUM OF ART

It wasn't much of a stretch for Candy Coated to create a show that would appeal to kids and adults equally. The Philly-based artist (formerly known as Candy Depew) regularly pedals her bike-mounted studio to schools and communities to teach people the basics of silk-screening, encouraging people to get hands-on with art and indulge their most playful whims.

"I see the kid in everybody, actually," Candy said recently during a walkthrough of her new installation, "Candy Coated Wonderland," at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. The show is part of the museum's summer-long Art Splash program, which brings together five family-friendly exhibitions as well as a number of interactive activities and programs in the Perelman Building.

It's not hard to see the kid in Candy Coated. From the sweet-toothed name to her bright red shock of cotton candy hair and pixie-like lilt, the artist embodies the very whimsy that she brings to her work.

Her vision is, if anything, willfully naïve, though she can effortlessly swerve from giggling over a banner printed with cat pictures to citing the influence of early 20th-century Italian futurist Giacomo Balla.

"Candy Coated Wonderland" uses selections from the museum's collection of children's fancy dress costumes as a jumping-off point for a room-size installation. Candy seized on details from the outfits, which include a Peter Pan costume, a harlequin dress and a painter's smock, to enlarge and print as patterns or sculptural elements.

The art spills onto the walls and floor, reflected in a fun-house mirror, as costume-clad mannequins play out miniature storybook narratives.

"When I see people working on their art, they go away and they have a little bliss moment," Candy said.

"So with these magical stories I'm trying to merge art-making and that kind of bliss. Even though it's wild and busy, it's still very calming."

The centerpiece of Art Splash is an exhibition of work by Philadelphia-born children's book illustrator Jerry Pinkney, who won the Caldecott Medal in 2010 for his picture book "The Lion and the Mouse." In addition, "Family Portrait" gathers a diverse range of photographers' images of family life; "Design for the Modern Child" displays contemporary design for children; and "All Dressed Up" compares adult and children's garments.

Let your phone find a concert for you and your friends

Listen. New apps locate nearby live music events based on users' tastes.

Use one of these apps and make your way to the concert. / GETTY IMAGES, ISTOCKPHOTO

Music lovers looking for a nearby concert can turn to apps that detect their location and list nearby live events based on the type of tunes they and their friends like.

Apps such as Bandsintown and Songkick scan fans' music libraries on their mobile devices and iTunes, along with music streaming services such as Spotify, Pandora and SoundCloud, to learn musical preferences so fans never miss a show.

Bandsintown also shows users which bands their friends are heading to see.

"There are two reasons why someone might go to a concert. The first is that they like a particular style of music or the artist. The second is that it's a social event with friends," said Julien Mitelberg, CEO of New-York based Bandsintown.

The app makes recommendations for concerts nearby and notifies users when friends indicate they are going to see a show. Users can also invite friends using the app, which is available worldwide for iPhone and Android.

Songkick, also available worldwide for iPhone and Android, gathers information from ticket vendors, websites and newspapers to compile its database of concerts.

An app from music streaming service Rhapsody, called Rhapsody Concerts, shows upcoming concerts nearby and lets users stream a band's albums before deciding whether to buy tickets.

"Our customers like to go see live music. But there weren't really any services out there that combined an unlimited catalog of songs with live music discovery," said Paul Springer, senior vice president of product at Rhapsody International, which is based in Seattle.

Thrillcall, which started four years ago, lets users buy tickets for any concert in every major city from its iPhone and Android app. About 100,000 concerts are available in the app at any time. REUTERS

When it comes to a backyard in Philadelphia, size matters

Real estate. What's your home worth? We talk to local Realtors to find out.

The condition of your kitchen is an important factor in determining the value of your home. / BEN MCGUINN

Admit it: When you see your neighbor's home for sale, you go online to find out how much it's listed for. It gets you thinking, "How much is my home worth?" With the housing market a fickle thing to follow, we learned a few tricks to help figure out what your Philly digs could go for, short of bringing in an official appraiser.

Timothy M. Garrity, a Realtor at US Spaces who works primarily in the Manayunk and Roxborough areas, says the first factor that influences a home's price is one that you might expect: its condition.

"By condition, I am referring to the age of the home — the newer, the pricier — and the quality of the finishes, such as granite countertops, stainless steel appliances and hardwood floors," he says.

Parking is also key. "Private parking makes the price go up, and street parking makes it less desirable," says Garrity.

Realtor Abe Haupt, also of US Spaces, agrees: "Parking is a deal breaker for many buyers. Some buyers are willing to live in a much more modest house if they can be assured a garage or some type of deeded parking." Regardless of your location, parking spaces are coveted commodities, and buyers are taking note of available spots.

It was once thought that an ugly or cramped bathroom would make the house hard to sell. Not so, according to Haupt. "There is a common misconception that the quality of a bathroom will affect the price of a home. In my opinion, buyers aren't nearly as concerned with this as they are with the size of the kitchen and the outdoor areas." A bad bathroom is a challenge, but is surmountable. The size of your backyard, however, won't be changing any time soon.

Buy and sell

"While prices have risen, it's still possible to get a bargain; but with interest rates poised to rise, time is running out," Haupt says. "Market inventory in Philadelphia County has fallen every month since August of 2011, and with fewer choices on the market and more buyers, sellers are getting choosier about which offers they are going to accept and often holding out for a higher offer."

Summer plans with Suno

GETTY IMAGES

Fashion. The designers discuss their CFDA win and fun under the sun.

Erin Beatty and Max Osterweis, the fashion darlings behind sustainable brand Suno, who have charmed the sleek and fabulous set with their colorful and quirky plays on ethnic prints, recently picked up the coveted 2013 CFDA Swarovski Award for Emerging Talent in Womenswear. The duo tells us about their next step and where we can find them when the 90-degree temps roll through.

Congrats on the win. Who did you call first?
Erin: I didn't even have my phone at the ceremony.
Max: I emailed Erin's dad who shared the news with her family, and I emailed my parents — and then social media took care of the rest.

What do you hope that winning the award will do for the brand?
Erin: Hopefully it helps to increase brand recognition and encourage the stores that we're not in to buy us. We definitely want to get back into Barney's.

How are you hoping to grow the company?
Erin: We know that we're going to want to dip into accessories sooner rather than later. Definitely cool bags and shoes.
Max: The No. 1 question that we get asked is when are we going to do mens? And we still have no answer for that.

What are your plans for the summer?
Max: Both of us are focusing on taking weekends off as much as we can. The first few years of Suno, none of us really took that much time off, so I started taking my weekends pretty seriously.
Erin: I actually rented a place in Germantown, N.Y., so I'm in the country.

What's an ideal summer day?
Erin: It's sitting down outside and reading.
Max: Spending time on my boat, fishing.

What are you currently reading?
Erin: I just finished "Freedom" by Jonathan Franzen, and now I'm onto "Lit" by Mary Karr.
Max: I just finished a 10-novel series "The Story of a Crime." It's the Swedish socialist detective novels from the '70s.

What looks are you loving for the summer?
Erin: I'm wearing embroidery all the time now.
Max: My mom was just with me and she insisted that we do a caftan for her.

Best way to beat the heat?
Max: Get in the water, whether it's a fire hydrant or the ocean or the pool.

ACCESSORIZE ME! GADGETS TO ENHANCE YOUR GAMES

Video games are not just about console and television. There's a whole world out there of sometimes cool, sometimes ridiculous accessory devices. Here are reviews of a few new things vying for your precious living-room space.

Hauppauge HD PVR 2 Gaming Edition

Hauppauge, $199

Along with makeup tutorials and creepy videos in which mustached men try to hypnotize you, the video-game walkthrough is one of the more popular YouTube genres. A vital tool in their creation is an HD recording device. You'd be hard-pressed to find an item more up to this task than Hauppauge's new HD PVR 2 game-centric video recorder. It offers live recording in 1080p so you'll never miss your most precious gaming moments. It works flawlessly, but the next-gen consoles (particularly the PS4) are eyeing this idea for their own systems.

Korg Kaossilator Pro+

Korg's new touchscreen-based synthesizer is only ostensibly gaming-related. It is, however, a perfect entry point to jump into the burgeoning world of chiptune (video game) music. The sound bank contains tons of NES and SNES blips, and the unit is built from the ground up to cater to non-musicians. You'll be making it sound like Mario is rhythmically collecting coins in no time. And, yes, it can also make other kinds of music.

Genius Arcade F-1000 Stick

Genius, $60

Modern controllers are great for certain genres — first-person shooters being the best example. Fighting games, however, really shine when you get a hold of an old-school joystick. The F-1000 is a great example of modern design mixed with retro favorites, like turbo buttons. This is all you'll need to be a major player in the world of competitive gaming. Just a warning: It only supports PS3 and PC. If you are an Xbox gamer, you'll have to look elsewhere.

Safety. Remote brake lights warn of danger before it's seen

Intelligent brake lights may soon warn drivers of danger ahead — even before they can see the hazard. / MASHABLE

Ford is working on remote, wireless brake lights that warn drivers, who will see a dashboard light illuminate when there's danger ahead.

It's easy to see the brake lights of a panic-stopping car right in front of you. But what if that car ahead is around a corner, over a hill or driving through a dense fog or rainstorm? Ford is testing technology that can warn you of such danger as part of its Safe Intelligent Mobility research project that involves 20 futuristic systems that aim to make cars safer.

The remote brake-light system would be particularly adept at avoiding chain-reaction collisions, where a car far ahead of you comes to a sudden stop and multiple cars can't stop in time to avoid a multi-car collision. With this brake light on your dashboard, drivers will be warned of panic stops before they become directly involved in their aftermath. Ford's field testing took place in Frankfurt, Germany, and included 500 test drivers in 120 vehicles. MASHABLE

HELP FOR HEARTBURN SUFFERERS

The question

Large meals keep me awake at night with heartburn. Help!

A big meal and a glass of orange juice — now that's a recipe for heartburn. / DIGITAL VISION

The Doctor Will See You Now

DR. MARK MELROSE

URGENTCAREMANHATTAN.COM

Mark Melrose, DO, is a board-certified emergency physician at Urgent Care Manhattan. Email him your questions: askdrmark@metro.us.

Heartburn, or as it is more officially known, Gastro-Esophageal Reflux Disease, produces a variety of symptoms that may include chest pain or burning, belching, a sore throat, an acid or bitter taste, coughing, hoarseness and bad breath. These are due to acid reflux — that is, acid from your stomach which is backed up into your esophagus, where it causes irritation and the symptoms we commonly call heartburn or indigestion.

Acid is usually blocked from the esophagus by a constricting sphincter muscle at the entrance to the stomach. This muscle sometimes becomes weakened as we age. Body position (lying down or bending over) or eating a large meal may push acidic stomach fluids into the esophagus. Certain foods, like citrus juice, alcohol, pepper, caffeine, peppermint and carbonated beverages, may also contribute to GERD. Increased abdominal pressure due to obesity and pregnancy can similarly result in acid reflux.

GERD should be properly diagnosed and treated as it not only results in discomfort but also may increase your risk for bleeding, narrowing of your esophagus or even esophageal cancer. Diagnostic tests may include an endoscopy with a fiber-optic scope to look into your upper digestive system, a measure of the acidity in the esophagus and stomach or X-rays that look at the motion of the esophagus as you swallow solids and liquids.

Treatment includes modifying your diet to eliminate contributing factors like caffeine and acidic and spicy foods. It also includes modifying your habits to reduce your meal size and eliminate tobacco and alcohol. If you are bothered by clear-cut symptoms of acid reflux, a trial of one of the common over-the-counter acid blocking products is usually worthwhile prior to seeking advanced relief. For stubborn symptoms, stronger medication to decrease or block the amount of acid secreted by the stomach may be prescribed by your physician after an evaluation to look for complicating factors.

Yes, you should get an HIV test

Health. National HIV Testing Day is the perfect day to do it.

It's not at the top of anyone's fun-things-to-do list (far from it!), but tomorrow is National HIV Testing Day, and it isn't a date to ignore. According to the Centers for Disease Control, in the United States alone, around 1.2 million people have HIV and an estimated one in five people don't know they're infected. Dr. Donna Futterman, director of the Adolescent AIDS Program at The Children's Hospital at Montefiore in Bronx, N.Y., says everyone who is sexually active — everyone — should be tested annually.

"People aren't totally aware," Futterman says. "Sixty percent of teens and younger adults don't know they are infected, and 20 percent of older adults don't know either. This is why HIV continues to spread."

Besides stemming the spread of infection, HIV testing means that people with the virus can be diagnosed and get the medical help they need. HIV is not the same horrifyingly deadly disease it was in the '80s; it's now survivable with treatment.

"We are trying for prevention, and to get the message to people that you can avoid HIV. But we also want people to know that if you have it, we can help," Futterman said.

Futterman says that your doctor might not think to ask you for an HIV test, and that you should be the one to bring it up.

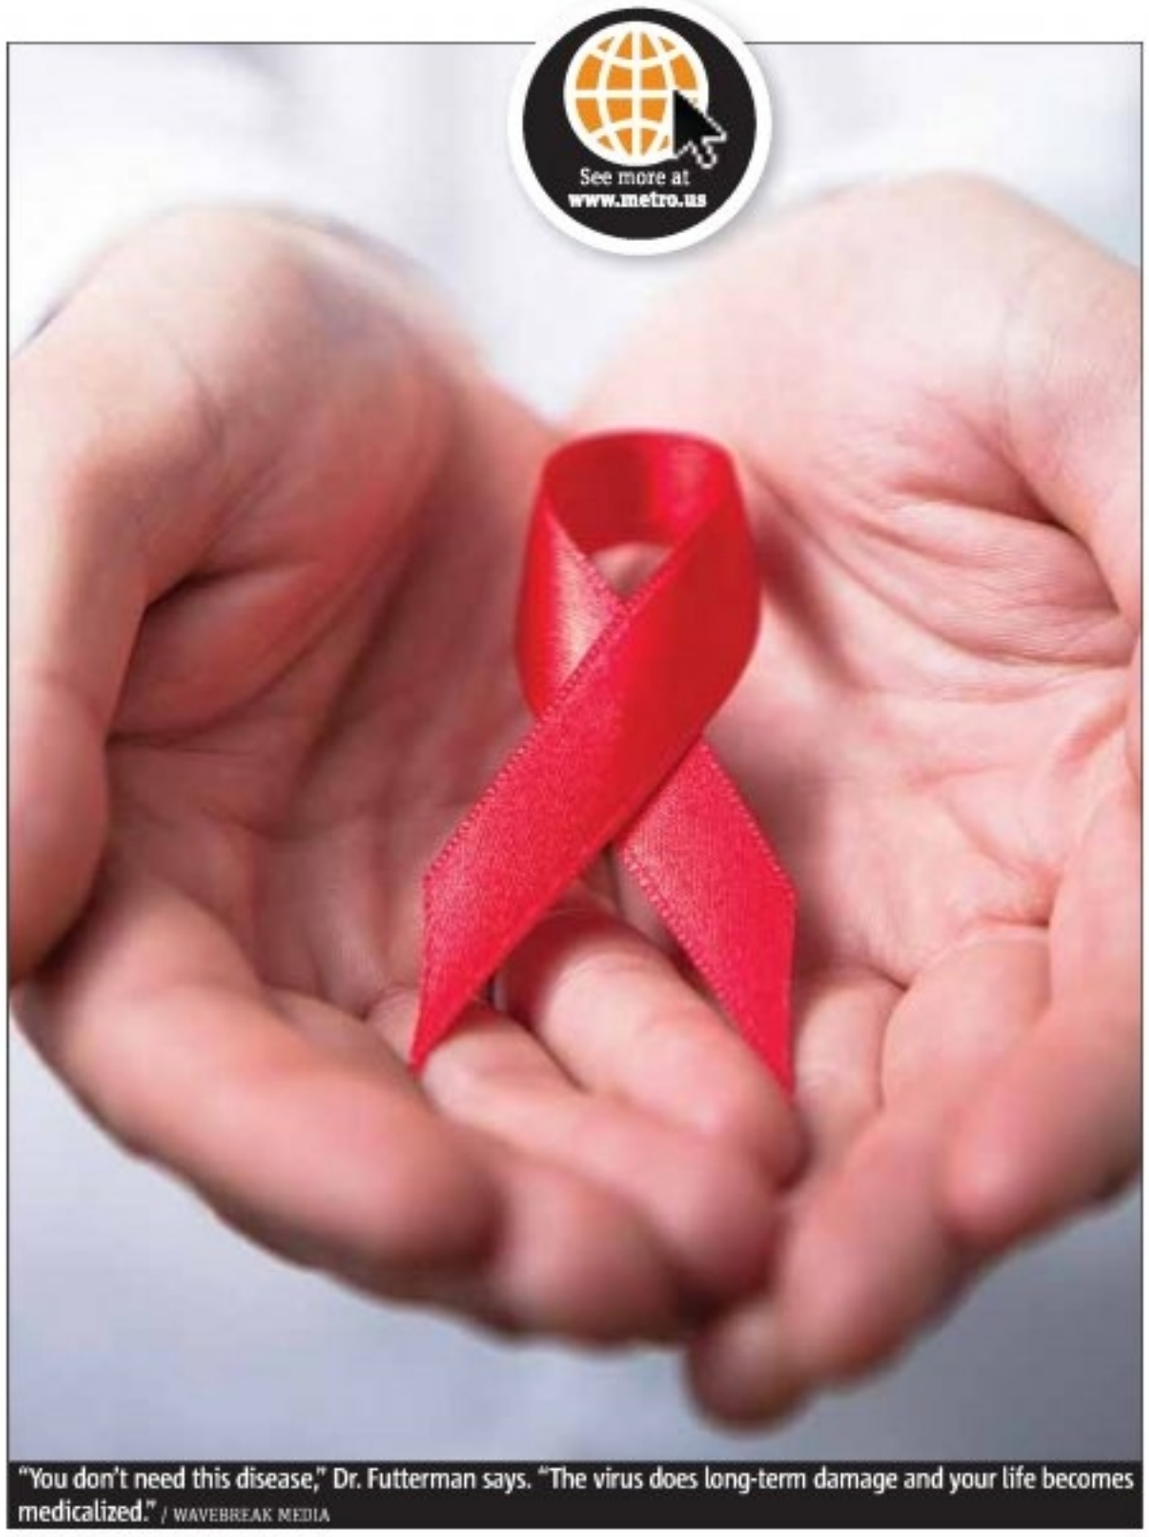
"Everyone should get HIV testing, but it's just not done," she says. "You have to think about it for yourself and protect yourself."

LINDA CLARKE
letters@metro.us

Quoted

"There's no human behavior change without constant messaging. People have not gotten the message. It might not kill you, but HIV is still a big deal. It's a lifelong infection."

Dr. Futterman, on the National HIV Testing Day campaign



"You don't need this disease," Dr. Futterman says. "The virus does long-term damage and your life becomes medicalized." / WAVEBREAK MEDIA

Get yours

All about the tests

You can get an HIV test that's fast, simple, painless and anonymous (or confidential). Oral fluid tests are a quick swab in the mouth that can detect the virus in less than an hour. Blood and urine tests are also options.

One new way to get an HIV test is through a combo test. HIV combo tests (also called fourth-generation tests) can provide accurate results within two weeks of exposure to HIV (normally, you have to wait three or four weeks to get an accurate diagnosis) because they can spot antigens — the actual HIV virus — as well as antibodies. The blood test is made by Abbott, which was the first lab to market an HIV test, in 1985. The tests are covered by insurance.

To find an HIV testing center near you, visit http://hivtest.cdc.gov/default.aspx. And to find a testing center that offers HIV combo tests, visit www.hivcombo.com.

Melanoma and metastasis

Topic of Study: Melanoma therapy to prevent metastasis
Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Mice
Results: The first potential drug to fight melanoma metastasizing is close to development, states a report in the journal ACS Chemical Biology. The drug would be used in addition to a laser to kill skin cancer cells in both the main tumor and to stop cancerous cells spreading to other parts of the body, which is known as metastasis.
Significance: Researchers hoped that this new therapy will improve on an existing one called photodynamic therapy (PDT), which involves a drug that kills cancer cells when exposed to light. PDT only affects the main tumor and doesn't stem the spread of cancer cells.

Stress and smoking after 9/11

Topic of Study: Post-9/11 Stress and Smoking Cessation
Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Data from the Behavioral Risk Factor Surveillance System
Results: One million former smokers across the country began smoking again after the 9/11 attacks, according to a Weill Cornell Medical College public health study. Researchers also looked at smoking habits after the Oklahoma City bombing but found that event didn't affect smoking rates in the U.S. as dramatically as 9/11.
Significance: The study's lead author concluded that the results revealed a hidden health and economic cost of terrorism. Financially, he estimated the cost of 9/11-induced smoking to government at $530 million to $830 million, with a potential to run higher if smoking continued beyond 2003.

One million former smokers started up again after the 9/11 attacks, according to a new study. / DIGITAL VISION

Antibodies to gluten in kids

Topic of Study: No link found between elevated gluten antibodies in children with autism and celiac disease
Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: 140 children, 37 with autism
Results: Elevated antibodies to gluten have been found in children with autism, but no link was found to celiac disease, which is an autoimmune disorder triggered by gluten. The study, which was headed by Dr. Armin Alaedini, assistant professor of medical sciences in Columbia University Medical Center's Department of Medicine and the Institute of Human Nutrition, was published in the online journal PLOS ONE.
Significance: There is extensive research into what causes autism, and among that is evidence that the immune system plays a role for some with the condition. Autistic children commonly have gastrointestinal symptoms and low-gluten diets are favored for them. The authors suggest more research.

Hereditary dystonia study

Topic of Study: Hereditary dystonia and deep brain stimulation
Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: 41 patients aged 8-71
Results: The most common form of hereditary dystonia – a movement disorder that can cause crippling muscle contractions – seems to respond well to deep-brain stimulation, according to a new report. Neurologist Michele Tagliati, director of the Movement Disorders Program at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center and Dr. Ron L. Alterman, chief of the Division of Neurosurgery at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, authored the study, which is published in the July issue of the journal Neurosurgery.
Significance: The study is focused on early-onset generalized dystonia, which is often associated with the DYT1 gene mutation. Less than 1 percent of the population carries this mutation, but the frequency might be three to five times higher among Ashkenazi Jews.

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. You can make this day by doing everything in accordance with your highest standards.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Even though you might do your utmost to conceal your tender inclinations, you won't be able to help being charitable.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Someone who holds you in high esteem might work on your behalf without your knowledge to make something easier for you. Be sure to pay it forward.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Something that appears to be difficult, even mysterious, will be a piece of cake to you. Don't hesitate to show your stuff.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. An associate who has been extremely helpful to you in the past can be of considerable assistance you to once again.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. If you are lucky enough to get involved with someone whose objectives parallel yours, both of you will have an easier time achieving your goals.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. When negotiating, keep in mind that the other party is just as eager to reach an understanding as you are.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Your associates will sense your strength and resolve. You need to realize that you don't have to be overly aggressive to get your way.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Thoughtful things you do for your mate or special someone will not go unnoticed or unappreciated.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. If at all possible, entertain at your place, where friends feel welcome and relaxed. They'll have a better time there than any fancy place.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. A gentle reminder should do the trick to get something that you loaned to another returned.

All can get an 'A' in morality

Re: 'Morality needs some absolutes' (Metro, June 24) Though I am an atheist, I don't reject religion; I recognize it has much to teach. However, to letter writer Gilbert Colon I would point out that to an atheist, his "objective, divinely inspired" morality is just as non-binding as any. The difference is, while he anticipates an eternal reward, I expect no reward for treating others with respect. I respect any path that leads to goodness, but must question any group that grades goodness on a curve based on belief in a deity.

DONALD MILLIKEN, VIA EMAIL

Learning by example

Re: 'What's faith ever done for anyone, anyway?' (Metro, June 18) I'm glad letter writer Amanda Canetti likes The Beatles; I do, too.

We often need others to express things differently so we understand the truth more fully. Religion isn't just about "a deity," but about humanity.

Jesus was human and showed us how to follow God in ordinary life. I need examples to see what does and doesn't work.

Scout: Sixers are 'a team in transition'

NBA. The team holds the No. 11 pick in tomorrow night's draft, assuming they don't trade up or down.

The Sixers still don't have a coach. There have been reports that CEO Adam Aron is being ousted. Andrew Bynum is a free agent. Yet life goes on.

The Sixers pick No. 11 in tomorrow's NBA draft, and also hold a pair of second-round picks, Nos. 35 and 42. On draft night, trades can be executed. Rosters can be reshaped.

Steven Adams is a fit.
GETTY IMAGES

What will the Sixers do?

Good question. They could retain their No. 11 pick and add a nice piece to a roster that needs tweaking. They could trade it. They could try and move up or down.

"The Sixers have a team in transition for sure," said one NBA scout, who asked to remain anonymous. "They had a setback with the Bynum situation and Doug [Collins] stepping down. They need many things right now, starting with a big man."

The Sixers can also increase their depth in the second round.

"I think the teams that draft well in the second round are the ones with the depth in the league," said another scout. "The Sixers will have options."

Are Sixers as dumb as they look now?

NBA. The team seems to be in utter disarray as the NBA draft approaches. Are they planning something big?

If new GM Sam Hinkie has a plan, he isn't sharing it with anyone. / GETTY IMAGES

How mixed up are the Sixers? Well, no one is sure who is still collecting paychecks from them.

On Monday, reports ran rampant that CEO Adam Aron had been fired. But, according to Aron's Twitter account, he was on vacation in Africa. That's fine, yet it took the team until late Monday night to release a statement denying the rumors.

If only this was the Sixers' biggest problem. They appear to be in limbo with the NBA draft arriving tomorrow. Doug Collins resigned as head coach more than two months ago, and they still haven't replaced him. Meanwhile, most of the league's top names didn't even interview with the team, with some since signing on with other teams. GM Sam Hinkie hasn't commented on anything since being hired in mid-May — not the ongoing coaching search or the possibility of bringing Andrew Bynum back.

The organization has remained silent. In fact, the only voice emanating from the bowels of the Wells Fargo Center has been Julius Erving. While Dr. J didn't rip the team's brass, he did poke a little fun at Hinkie's addiction to analytics.

"It's turning basketball into rocket science, right?," Erving said. "I think if a team does it and they win, then everybody is going to do it. If the team is a cellar dweller, you can analyze all they want, nobody is going to follow them."

Take it in, Sixers fans. No one seems to know what's going on with this franchise. Will they hire a new coach? Will the GM emerge from his cocoon? Will Bynum return?

Either the Sixers are about to look like the smartest guys in the room … or they are going to remain a clueless enigma with no new championship banners.

The one thing Hinkie did say in his introductory press conference was that big moves matter. He'll have his first crack at making one of those in Thursday's NBA draft.

"Big moves may only come around every 10 years or so," he said. "The question is, how are you going to handle it to put yourself in the best position to make one?"

It's your move, Mr. Hinkie.

Flyers use compliance buyout on Bryzgalov

NHL. The Flyers cut ties with the enigmatic and mostly inefficient goaltender after just two seasons.

The Flyers announced Tuesday they will exercise a compliance buyout of Ilya Bryzgalov's contract. / Getty Images

Flyers fans — and those in the media — you won't have Ilya Bryzgalov to kick around anymore.

After much internal and external debate, the Flyers decided to part ways with their enigmatic goaltender yesterday, just two years into what was supposed to be a nine-year, $51 million deal.

As was the case with popular forward Danny Briere last week, the team will exercise a compliance buyout of Bryzgalov's contract, which will cost them $22.8 million over the next 14 years, as stipulated by the NHL's current collective-bargaining agreement.

But it will also free nearly $6.5 million of salary-cap space, which will give the team some wiggle room to fortify the roster.

"I met with Ilya [yesterday] morning and informed him that we are going to exercise compliance buyout of his contract," said GM Paul Holmgren in a statement.

"This was a very difficult business decision to make for us. We want to thank Ilya for his time here and wish him all the best moving forward."

So ends one of the more disappointing — yet certainly fascinating — chapters in Flyers history.

While the Bryzgalov era didn't provide the results team owner Ed Snider was seeking when he engineered the 2011 deal in an effort to bring his franchise some sorely needed stability in goal, it was seldom dull.
